EXPERTISE

Deb leads Lockton's Cyber & Technology Claims Practice and is responsible for supporting the cyber claims advocates in the U.S. on all cyber claim-related issues. She works closely with her counterparts in product, risk consulting and analytics to ensure that policy language is consistently improved, that clients know about and have access to their insurers' pre- and post-loss offerings, and that clients remain informed and apprised of industry trends and developments. She frequently speaks on panels addressing cyber exposures and risk management, including ransomware and incident response issues.

Deb has significant experience in cyber, technology errors and omissions, and miscellaneous professional liability claims. She has handled numerous complex claims, including ransomware incidents, third-party privacy class actions and business interruption matters. In addition to her claims background, Deb has extensive experience as an insurance coverage attorney.
